Overview

Secluded beach

Featuring a half-mile crescent beach, this resort provides 600 acres of seclusion for vacationing in harmony with nature.

Hilltop health spa

Resort boats take guests to secluded Virgin Gorda beaches. A hilltop health spa provides rejuvenation with spectacular views.

What to Expect: Opened in 1964 by Laurance Rockefeller (son of John D.) as one of his harmonious-with-nature resorts, Little Dix Bay offers a Robinson-Crusoe-with-dress-code experience. Arriving on the resort's boat from the airport, guests see a postcard-perfect bay surrounded by green hills and edged by a crescent beach. 600 acres of property in all, only 22 acres developed. Gradually the eye picks out a cluster of soaring, many-angled wood-shingle roofs (the Pavilion dining area) and widely spaced thatched shades ringing the beach. These number 59, an example of the spaciousness and privacy here even when the resort is fully booked.

Amenity Highlights: Protected by a coral reef, Little Dix Bay offers calm-water swimming and snorkeling opportunities as well as a half-mile beach furnished with 59 thatched shades (bohios) widely spaced the length of the beach for privacy. Complimentary water-taxi service transports guests to 13 other secluded beaches on Virgin Gorda and to the Baths at Virgin Gorda, a famed series of grottoes and pools. For rejuvenation-with-a-view, the resort's health spa is located atop a hill and includes cliffside treatment rooms with indoor and outdoor showers and panoramic vistas.

Insider Tip: Complimentary shuttle service takes guests around the resort, including to Cow Head Trail, a half-mile hike that culminates at 400 feet above sea level with a spectacular sunset and Caribbean view.
